

Coolidge Believes His Duty Is to Stay on Job of Being President of All the People

Will Make Few Speeches and Refrain From Involving Himself in Politics.

PRINCIPLES ARE KNOWN

May Amplify Some but Will Not Change Any of Them, Particularly As the Racial and Religious Tests, Farm Relief, Confident of Result.

Before starting on his 100,000-mile trip which will cover 31 northern and western states, Mr. Coolidge had a talk with President Coolidge at the White House on the issue of the campaign and will analyze the attitude of the other nominees as he encounters them on their speaking tour. In this dispatch Mr. Lawrence sets forth some of the domestic aspects of the campaign. Tomorrow's dispatch will deal with the Coolidge foreign policy.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—President Coolidge feels that the lines of battle have been drawn and that no new factors will be thrust into the campaign—at least so far as he is concerned.

Mr. Coolidge holds what many truly believe to be a "common-sense" viewpoint toward his own political fortunes. When asked, for instance, whether he intended to make many speeches in the campaign, he laughingly remarked that he never heard of a candidate being defeated for talking too little, but that he heard of a number who had been defeated by talking too much. Occasional addresses will be made but they will be largely in amplification and explanation of the main principles that already have been laid down by the President.

Our discussion covered a wide range of subjects from agriculture to the Klan question as a political issue. The President has been getting letters of all kinds and advice from all quarters with respect to the importance of the Klan as an issue in the national campaign. Mr. Coolidge feels that he cannot forget for an instant that he is President of the United States and that he must pursue for the campaign an attitude which does not involve him in the mire of politics.

From a publicity viewpoint, Mr. Coolidge appreciates full well that his opponents are obliged to make wide speaking tours and campaign actively but that the man who is President of the United States is actually performing the duty of the office and the public impression of his job is obtained from the day to day developments in the White House. It is his duty every day and then to be tied down to official tasks and not be able to answer back in political fashion. Mr. Coolidge, however, has determined to maintain an attitude of conformity with presidential tradition and make only occasional addresses.

The President has a fixed idea that most of the discussion of the Ku Klux Klan is the discussion of the Klan as a political issue and that it does not touch the Chief Executive or the powers of the Federal Government. Most of the crimes laid to the Ku Klux Klan by its accusers are covered, he believes, by the police powers of the several states. As for the theory that the President should not apply any religious test in appointing appointments to office, Mr. Coolidge is of the opinion that his own record, both as Governor of Massachusetts and as President, will be sufficient answer on that score. Not only has he appointed Jews and Catholics to office but also negroes and he thinks it would be unwarranted on his part to be conscious of any distinction while considering persons for public office who do not even care to dignify the subject by a public declaration because he believes it to be one of the natural functions of the presidential office to consider appointments for office on the merits of the individual and without being provoked by or related to racial or religious questions.

Not long ago, the President's secretary gave out a letter in which he stated that Mr. Coolidge is not a member of the Klan nor in sympathy with its objects. So far as the White House is concerned, that will have to suffice for the remainder of the campaign. Mr. Coolidge will discuss from time to time the principles of religious freedom and the constitutional guarantees as he finds them appropriate in connection with the general campaign but he has already said virtually all that he is going to say on the issue. Incidentally, he would not be surprised if, after the campaign was over, people were admitting that it had exaggerated the importance of both the Klan and the issue itself.

In respect to agriculture, the President has it in mind to make the proposed agricultural commission a clearing house for all ideas on the subject of agricultural relief. He is aware that the board itself will not complete its work until after election.

DAWSON MALTAS TO OBSERVE 40TH BIRTHDAY SUNDAY

One-Way Traffic Rule to Dawson Fair Applies at Night

A number of motorists who thought the one-way traffic rule on the Dawson Fair, effective during the days of the Dawson Fair, would be lifted at night, especially following the past two rainy days, have been considerably inconvenienced the past two nights by being turned back at Leaning No. 1 and having to return to Trotter to take the road connecting with the main branch at Italy crossing. There they found two-way traffic operating.

A guard was stationed at Leaning No. 1 to stop travel toward Vanderbill from that end. There was no last evening at Italy Crossing, however, and the one-way rule not being enforced there, cars directed toward Trotter found traffic running against them on that road.

Today and this evening, however, the one-way rule will apply on both roads and better results will be obtained. The same restrictions will apply tomorrow.

The accident occurred about 9 o'clock. The shadow of a telephone pole fell across the sidewalk and Mrs. McClintock did not notice the hole.

HEAVY FROST IS BELIEVED TO HAVE DAMAGED CROPS

Temperature Drops to Freezing Point in Places; White Deposit General.

ANXIETY FELT FOR CORN

Needs Several Weeks Yet to Bring It to Maturity; Tomatoes Beginning to Ripen; Peaches and Other Fruits Show Little Sign of Fall Color.

Considerable damage to crops is believed to have been caused by last night's low temperature and accompanying heavy frost, with ice in places. A light frost had been predicted by the Weather Bureau. It was so heavy that where the sun had not melted it the deposit was still visible at 5 o'clock.

There is anxiety for the corn crop which is far from mature. Tomatoes have just begun to ripen in many gardens. Peaches are still green with no sign of the ruddy hue of ripeness.

At this time of the year vegetation is not so susceptible to damage as in the spring when it is young and tender.

A canvass of farmers seemed to indicate that only in the low sections was the frost heavy. For instance at Poplar Grove and along the valley to Pennsville there was a heavy deposit, with ice. On the hills it was said the frost was light and that there was apparently no damage.

Although the official thermometer on the top of the West Penn building did not register freezing temperatures—and never does register the lowest mark because of the heat emanating from the building—ice formed in the air. There was a thin coating over still water in exposed places in the low-lying sections.

The diary of R. V. Rendine shows that there was a killing frost on the morning of September 11, 1917. There has been none so early since that time. The frost on the morning of September 11, 1917, was said to have been the same as that of the morning of September 11, 1917, and Charles F. Hirt noticed a coating of frost on the East Park bridge.

Snow on Humboldt Mt. in the mountains a few miles on this side of Scottdale, was reported yesterday afternoon. It was said the snow fell for 15 minutes. Early yesterday afternoon there was a brief hail storm here.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 11.—Thousands of dollars' damage was done by the first late light, the heaviest for nearly September in the history of the local weather bureau. Forecaster W. S. Brotman declared today. Much damage, he said, was done to corn, tomatoes, and other vegetables, especially in the low lying districts.

Young Men Arrested For Robbing Cars of Parts at M. E. Camp

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, Sept. 11.—During the summer, persons parking automobiles at the Methodist Episcopal camp at Laurelville missed tires, tools and automobile parts but were unable to find where they went.

Now Chief of Police Frank Gano has shown them where a part, at least, went. He found them hidden among the rocks in the region near the camp, and arrested three young men who will be given a hearing this evening before Justice of the Peace William Kennell. William Lewis, colored, of Scottdale, and Walter Miller of Laurelville are in the lockup here, while Jacob Heller of near Laurelville is out on bail. They are charged with having taken the parts.

A lot of tools recovered were identified by Dr. L. T. Gilbert as his. Some auto parts were claimed by Hugh R. Francis.

Crowe Seeks to Completely Seal Slayers' Fate

By United Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—State's Attorney Robert L. Crowe already has started his fight to make certain that Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb spend the rest of their lives in the penitentiary.

Crowe is preparing a complete review of the case, to be sent with the prisoners today to the state penitentiary at Joliet. He calls it a "statement of facts" and hopes that it will form a record so secure that no pardon or parole board at any time in the future will release the young slayers from the penitentiary. In addition Crowe will send all of the evidence before the jury to the state penitentiary before Chief Justice John R. Crowe, who yesterday sentenced the boys to life imprisonment.

REPUBLICANS SWEEP MAINE OFFICES IN ELECTION

RALPH O. BREWSTER, 3; BERT M. FERNALD, 4

The Republicans drew first blood in annual elections when the state of Maine, long regarded as a stronghold of national trend, returned United States Senator Bert Fernald to the Senate and elected Ralph O. Brewster as governor. Brewster polled in excess of 30,018 over William R. Patah, Democrat, and Fernald's lead over Fulton J. Redman, Democrat, is approximately 50,163. An unprecedented total vote of over 251,834 was cast. Brewster was endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan.

Curfew Grange Takes First Prize, Dawson Is Second at County Fair

Racing Program At Dawson Fair Under Way Today

The racing program at the Dawson fair got under way today. For the first time since the fair opened Tuesday morning the clouds and rain were missing and the sun shone brilliantly. The track was in fairly good condition. There was a large gathering of lovers of the sport. This afternoon was expected to bring out a record attendance.

Five races were carded for today, starting at noon.

Four races will be run on the final day, Friday. The 2-12 race for a $1,000 purse has 17 entries, while the 2-25 race for a $1,000 purse, added money, has eight entries. An entry has been entered in the 2-17 race for $100 added money purse, while seven entries have been received in the 2-17 trot for a $400 purse with added money.

Despite the heavy downpour of rain yesterday at noon that necessitated the postponement of the races at the second day of the Great Dawson Fair, a fair-sized crowd turned out. More than 600 automobiles were parked in the fair grounds and more than 1,000 people were in attendance. The entertainment card was put on last evening. The Flying Valentines, Fisher Sisters, Pink Mules, Nelson Sisters and the Steel City Collegian Orchestra entertained those at the park. There was an excellent display of fireworks. The entertainment card will be repeated today and tomorrow with two performances each day. An exceptionally large crowd swelled the dance hall last evening immediately after the fireworks display.

Tomorrow is "Kiddie Day." Children will be admitted free of charge. No tickets have been issued. The children may just "walk past the ticket man." Regardless of whether or not they are accompanied, all children arrangements have been made for the entertainment as well as the safety of the little folks. While most school districts have decided to permit school children to attend the fair by declaring a school holiday, practically every school room in the county will be closed on Friday afternoon. Defense day programs have been planned for Friday presentation while no school sessions are planned for Friday afternoon in many schools. This will permit the juveniles to attend the fair.

GEO. H. SWEARINGEN'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The funeral of George Henry Swearingen, who died at his home at Dunbar, Wednesday morning, will be held Sunday afternoon. The service will be at the home at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. R. Wylie, pastor of the Dunbar Presbyterian Church, and assisted by Rev. Gilbert Good, rector of the Episcopal Church of Connellsville. Lulu Towns Commandery No. 48, Knights Templar, will have full charge of the funeral. Burial will be made in the Swearingen family lot at Oak Grove Cemetery, Uniontown, in charge of Funeral Director J. M. Burdona of Dunbar.

Mr. Swearingen was born at Hopewood February 13, 1852. He received his education in the common schools. His entire business life, of more than 50 years, shows a successful and unusual business record. He began his business career as a clerk in the store of E. H. Reid at Broad Ford in October, 1871. In May, 1872, he went with Watt, Reid & Company at its store at Dunbar, remaining there as a clerk about four years. In 1878 he formed a partnership with Alexander Porter of Dunbar, his father-in-law.

In 1880 he bought Mr. Porter's interest in the store and continued in the mercantile business until about two years ago when, because of failing health, he sold out and retired from business.

Mr. Swearingen was an active and progressive citizen. He planned his whole business life to the benefit of Dunbar, investing his money in real estate and personal property and continuing active in business there for more than 50 years. He was an active member of the Republican party, serving on the Republican County Committee for a number of years. He served two terms on the Dunbar borough council and was Republican central committee member for the borough of Dunbar. He was appointed postmaster of Dunbar by the late President William McKinley, holding that office for six years.

On Christmas Day, 1875, he married Miss Sarah Porter, a daughter of the late Alexander Porter of Dunbar. She died in 1909, leaving to survive, her husband and two granddaughters, Joseph S. Swearingen of Connellsville, and four sisters, Mrs. Minnie Clifford of Youngstown, Pa., Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Kremer and Mrs. Rebecca Case and Miss Catherine Swearingen of Uniontown, the last named now quite ill in the Uniontown Hospital. He was a cousin of J. Q. Van Swearingen, president judge of the Fayette county courts.

He was a devout member of the Presbyterian Church of Dunbar and also a member of the following Masonic bodies: King Solomon Lodge No. 348, P. & A. M., Connellsville; Valley Chapter No. 145 and Uniontown Commandery, Knights Templar No. 49, Uniontown; Lighthouse Lodge of Perfection, Pittsburgh Consistory and Syria Shrine.

The three main winners in the sheep department, in charge of George Elliott, were Krantz & Sons of Dover, Ohio; Live Stock Service of Columbus, Ohio; and M. P. Tate of Mercer. The exhibit was one of the best of its kind ever held at the fair. Elwood Fulton of Washington, Pa., judged the exhibit.

The poultry department, with E. E. Embury as superintendent, had over 1,000 chickens entered. F. H. Ricketts of Copestown, Ohio, was the chief winner in this department. Ricketts won the same exhibit two weeks ago at Columbus, Ohio. M. P. Tate of Mercer was the other principal winner. The cattle show, superintended by James M. Kennedy, was proclaimed.

Parade of Three Sections Will Be Chief Feature of the Demonstration

WORKERS OF RED CROSS

Will Be Provided With Automobiles; Central Trades & Labor Council, Railway Brotherhoods and Other Organizations Will Be In Line.

Fair weather, which seems reasonably assured, and the response of the people to the call, which it is believed their pride and loyalty will prompt them to make, are the essentials to the largest success of tomorrow's observance of National Defense Day in Connellsville.

The short time in which preparations have been in progress has prevented all the details being worked out at this time, but the persons in charge are applying themselves industriously and it is expected everything will be in readiness by 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, the hour set for the movement of the parade from the State Armory to Fayette field.

FLING 'OLD GLORY' TO THE BREEZE TOMORROW

Do not forget that displaying 'Old Glory' at your homes and places of business tomorrow is a part of your duty in helping to appropriately observe National Defense Day.

The route announced some days ago will be followed. This will make a short march covering South Pittsburgh street to Crawford avenue thence by the latter to North Ave., Apple, North Pittsburgh and West Fayette streets to York avenue, thence to Fayette field. It is especially desired by the committee in charge that a flag be displayed at every home, place of business in the city, and along the line of march.

Chief Marshal J. L. Evans has just finally arranged the formation of the parade but it will probably include massed colors, city police, officials, city firemen, citizens committee, Board of Education, Liberty Loan teams, Daughters of the American Revolution, veterans of the Grand Army, United Veterans of the World War, Red Cross workers, Trades and Labor Council and patriotic and fraternal organizations.

The second section will comprise the Howitzer Company and Medical Detachment, 110th Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, 94th Engineer Battalion of Baltimore & Ohio employees, members of the Veteran Foremen Wars and The American Legion and other military organizations. The third section will be made up of citizens in automobiles who are requested to turn out in large numbers. The National Military, Firemen's, Elks and Old Time Regiment bands will be distributed throughout the parade formation. At the park the bands will be massed.

At the park the parade section will form in front of the grandstand from which the addresses will be delivered. The program will be limited to a short address, probably three in number and some musical selections.

The Central Trades & Labor Council yesterday took the necessary action to authorize the participation in the parade. Representatives of the various unions comprising the council were instructed to urge their members to turn out. The Railway Brotherhoods were also invited to join in the demonstration.

It having developed that many of the Red Cross workers feel themselves unequal to the task of marching to Fayette field, it was decided last evening to provide automobiles for their transportation. In order to ascertain how many cars will be required for this purpose ladies of the city who were members of the Connellsville Chapter during the war are requested to advise Mrs. John L. Gans, chairman of the committee, or A. R. Silcox, in charge of automobiles, by telephone at the earliest convenience possible. Red Cross workers will wear the white armband which is the uniform of their respective department when the chapter was functioning.

A meeting of the citizens committee will be held at the State Armory this evening at 7:30 o'clock to complete the arrangements for tomorrow's demonstration.

The reason for the change was a disagreement over the requirements of his administration under the reorganization code it was said by persons familiar with the differences between the Governor and Meeker.

Coledge Believes His Duty is to Stay on Job

but he is hopeful that something concrete may be worked out before the next session of Congress so that whatever is determined upon may soon be put into legislative form. Mr. Coledge it will be recalled did not come out for or against the McNary-Haugen bill with the export corporation plan when it was up for discussion in the last session of Congress. He did give particular attention to all the various proposals for farm relief and seemed to think well of the suggestions contained both in the Curtis-Aswell and the Capper Willamette bills. These related to a scheme for the combination of co-operative marketing organizations. Mr. Coledge had a group of experts examine the McNary-Haugen bill and he was in hopes that out of the general discussion would come a more rational line of farm interest. For a while on the surface, it appeared as if most of the farm organizations were in favor of the McNary-Haugen bill. The true nature of the support given the measure was discounted in the National Capital to some extent because of the pressure extended from various sections of the country upon the executive boards of the farm organizations to bring into line behind the bill though the farm leaders here were not altogether certain of its value.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would try your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to be in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I am now a healthy woman, and I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all done in a summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three more come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

CONSOLIDATION OF 3,000 RAILROADS BIG UNDERTAKING

Plans for Which Interstate Commerce Commission Is Soon to Announce

AUTHORIZED BY CONGRESS

By WILLIAM J. McEVROY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—After three years' work, the Interstate Commerce Commission is preparing to announce its final scheme for consolidating the more than 3,000 railroads in the United States into a limited number of systems.

Publication of the plan is expected to be the opening gun in one of the most argumentative and important battles ever fought over the nation's transportation system.

The first battle now over the plan probably will take place in Congress when the opposing factions—those who would make consolidation according to the plan compulsory and those who would leave it to the railroads to act as they see fit—clash in an effort to get through laws expressing their views.

Back of those who oppose it will be lined the railroads of the country who disagree with the commission's lineup. With their powerful publicity bureaus, they are expected to have no room for doubt in the minds of the legislators and of the public where they stand on the subject.

The roads do not object in principle to consolidation, for they understand its economic importance, and, since railroads were first built, have engaged in merging small roads into big systems. But they do object to the various aggregations of carriers which the commission has seen fit to bracket in the interests of economy and public convenience.

The authority by which the commission embarked on its revolutionary undertaking was derived from the Transportation Act of 1920. With this power, it engaged Professor William Z. Ripley, of Harvard University, a geographer, anthropologist, economist and political scientist, and a better railroad man than many in the business, some say, to draft a tentative plan of consolidation.

Ripley's report of several hundred pages and maps, was submitted to the commission, with some modifications on August 3, 1921. His purpose was to give the question a starting point, something concrete to argue about, change and revise.

This prospective proposed 19 independent systems of railroads covering the whole country. The great carriers were picked as nuclei, around which the weaker carriers were grouped. They were distributed as follows:

Trunk line territory—between Chicago and Atlantic—New England—1; Southeastern—2; New England—1; West of the Mississippi—7.

Over two years were spent by all parties to the question in hearings in the case. They were held at Washington, with the executives and counsel of the roads present, to discuss with the commission the merits and demerits of the scheme, and to present counter proposals.

Hearings were held in every large city of the country, and the public and representatives of industry given the opportunity to express their views. Some cities that seemed likely to lose their status as "rate-breaking points"—a cherished economic advantage violently protested. Others favored it.

But all this argument was for the purpose of shaking down the subject and gathering material on which to base a final, permanent plan, representing the commission's matured view as to how the railroads of the country should be consolidated into a limited number of systems.

And the commission is now about to render its verdict. Undoubtedly there will be numerous and several fundamental changes in the original plan. The commission said as much during the hearings when defects were disclosed.

The consolidation question, however, up to and including this point, is an academic one. There is no compulsion attached to the law; no road is required to merge with another as the commission recommends.

The battle over this question will be fought over this question. Many feel that there was no use in opening the question, if the government did not intend to force some action, and suggest consolidation legislation. Others, on the middle ground suggest giving the roads a stated period of time—say, seven years—to effect such consolidations, at which voluntarily will on some where near the line of the plan, and after that time, let the government step in to force consolidation. A group of dissenters would contend that the whole scheme is the waste-basket.

GREATER NICKLE PLATE MAY ENTER PITTSBURG OVER P. & W. VA. R. R.

What is believed to be the first step in the consolidation of the Pittsburgh & West Virginia railway with the greater Nickel Plate system, promoted by the Van Swearingen, was taken by the directors of the company on Monday when they voted to segregate the coal properties, held under title of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company.

According to the plan proposed, the railway company's $1,100,000 preferred stock will be redeemed and the stockholders given the right to subscribe to the $4,000,000 capital stock of the coal company, the corporation to be divorced.

The property of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company includes about 15,000 acres and several operating mines in Allegheny and Washington counties having an estimated reserve of 72,500,000 tons, and valued at $12,500,000 in the company's balance sheet. The total assets of the company are valued at $17,500,000.

The property of the company was developed as a coal producer under the personal direction of the late J. P. Brennan, who served as general manager for a number of years preceding the organization of the Thompson Connellsville Coke Company, with which he was identified until shortly before his death.

If the Pittsburgh & West Virginia railroad, formerly the Wabash, is acquired by the Nickel Plate the construction of 25 miles of road between Mingo Junction and Lisbon, O., will give the latter entrance into Pittsburgh. An alternate plan is to acquire control of the Wheeling & Lake Erie which already has connections with this Pittsburgh & West Virginia by a line from Kent, O., to Pittsburgh Junction, O.

By-Product Plant To Be Built at Erie

The Perry Iron Company has completed plans for the construction of a by-product coking plant of 50 ovens near its blast furnace at Erie. The daily output of 400 tons of coke will be consumed on the ground.

Gas to the amount of 4,000,000 cubic feet daily will be supplied to the local gas company which will erect the necessary machinery for blending it with natural gas.

PARKING IN MAIN STREET, VANDERBILT OFF DURING FAIR

Three Offenders Arraigned Before Burgess and Fined $5 Each.

SCHOOLS CLOSE FRIDAY

Special to The Courier.
VANDERBILT, Sept. 11.—Parking for any length of time on the main thoroughfare of the town has been forbidden by Burgess R. E. McLaughlin during the four days of the fair, when he said that the town was swamped in an unusual traffic officer for the four days. Three offenders were arrested yesterday and fined $5. They were Frank Bert of Scottville, Walter Jordan of Bonna Vista and Robert Haffine of Halltown. They were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace G. B. Arison.

The town streets are narrow and traffic cannot move smoothly with cars parked along the main thoroughfare, the Burgess said. Traffic is exceptionally heavy in the town during the days of the fair as the greatest part of the fair attendees must pass through town to get to the park. Special Officer Means kept the thoroughfare "cleaned" yesterday.

Especially for hard pulls on heavy grades

Good gasoline is more than a matter of selecting crude oils offering the most desirable motor fuel distillates. It is more than a matter of refining skill. It includes a knowledge of modern motor construction and a consideration for the driving conditions encountered in the regions in which it is sold.

When you buy Atlantic Gasoline, you may be sure that it is fitted to your particular needs. Here in Pennsylvania, where hills keep you stepping down hard on the accelerator much of the time, you need full-powered gasoline.

To be full-powered it must be properly balanced. It must ignite just as easily and burn just as completely when fed fast through the carburetor as when you're going along on the level with your toe just touching the accelerator.

Gasoline which hasn't this important quality—balance—soon chokes your carburetor, enters your cylinders not fully vaporized, dilutes your motor oil, burns incompletely, fouls spark-plugs, produces an excess of carbon and develops only a fraction of its potential power.

Play safe! You know Atlantic. In the forefront of motor fuels ever since the automobile was an infant, Atlantic has kept pace with every progress in the refining and automotive industries. Rest assured, there is no finer, more dependable, more scientifically correct motor fuel made. Atlantic Gasoline is clean. It is full-powered. It is right—formulated for highest efficiency under all speeds, loads and temperatures and especially for hard pulls on heavy grades.

Why ever use anything else?

"THE MAN FROM WYOMING," with Jack Hoxie in the stellar role, provides splendid entertainment today at the Paramount. Hoxie, it is said, was at one time one of the world's most famous cowboys and served the apprenticeship in the art in which he excels on a large western cattle ranch. Cattlemen have long had a bitter aversion to sheep men and although it is hard to think that any such thought could interfere with the characterization of a motion picture star it undoubtedly caused conversation when Hoxie was presented with the script for his picture.

He has the role of an escaped convict who had been wrongfully imprisoned and to escape detection by prison authorities becomes a sheep herder. He goes into a feud with cattleman on a neighboring ranch through the crooked methods of his employer and several sensational range battles are waged which savor of the gun fights of the West's olden days.

The climax comes in a terrific fight between Hoxie and his employer when the young man revolts at the methods of the sheep man. Hoxie narrowly escapes lynching over a shooting scene and is saved by the girl owner of the cattle ranch around whom the feud centered.

"Dynamite Dan" will be the feature attraction on Friday and Saturday.

The Soisson

"THE TENTS OF ALLAH"—On view today at the Soisson presents Monte Blue and Mary Alden in interesting roles. Mary Alden is again cast in a mother role, but it is unlike any other of her famous characterizations. Besides unfolding a colorful and thrilling romance, most of the action of which is laid in Morocco, "The Tents of Allah" is declared to be one of the most lavishly spectacular pictures has been screened for a long time. Throughout it breathes the atmosphere of the tropics and of that alluring region "where East meets West."

The picture was filmed at the El A MacManus studios in Porto Rico where sets in keeping with the local atmosphere were erected, with the assistance of architectural experts from Morocco. So faithfully was the work performed, according to persons who have had a preview, that "The Tents of Allah" is said to be strongly suggestive of an art production.

Mary Thurman, Sally Crute Frank Currier, Stacey Harlan, Martin Faust and others are importantly cast in support of Monte Blue and Mary Alden. Thousands of extras were used in the picture, also a detachment of U. S. Marines and ten men from the famous Porto Rico National Guard. Friday and Saturday, "Stormy Seas" will be shown.

The Orpheum

"DULCY," which opened today at the Orpheum for a three day attraction, presents Constance Talmadge in the leading role.

"Dulcy" is a dumb-bell. Constance makes her very personal situation of a household with onanism. She plays the role of a young wife whose forte is to split the beans. She is imbued with a desire to help and only succeeds in hindering. The climax of her stupidity comes when she thinks a woman's wit and intuition would be a powerful ally in her husband's affairs, and seeks to interject here into them almost ruining. Just how the situation is relieved is one of the best laughs of the picture.

Miss Talmadge has played so many roles so well that it is difficult to say which has been her best. One may venture the opinion that none have been better than her "Dulcy" which she plays with a sincerity and spontaneity which is delightful. Her supporting cast, we are certain, has never been better. Jack Holhall plays opposite the star in his usual able manner. Johnny Herrera, as her brother, gives a finished performance. Claude Gillingwater, Gilbert Douglas, Andre de Branger, May Wilson, Anne Cornwall and Milla Davenport are well cast for their roles.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week "The Covered Wagon" will be shown.

"THE COVERED WAGON"—James Cruze's big Paramount production with J. Warren Kerrigan and Lois Wilson in the leading roles will open on Monday at the Orpheum for a four-day attraction.

One of the most compelling and primitive love stories ever told on the screen is embodied in "The Covered Wagon"—Dunsmuir's novel. The romance between Molly Wingate, the belle of old liberty town and young Will Burton, the son of a pioneer, is a story of love and adventure. A bitter rival in the character of Sam Woodhouse causes untold trouble, but in the end all comes right. The production is one of exceptional magnificence. Thousands of persons appear in the story, and the wagon train is a real buffalo hunt and a thrilling picture.

Working in Noisy Places Increases Blood Pressure

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Blood pressure of a business man of 40 rises from 10 to 15 points within an hour after he enters a noisy office in the morning, according to W. S. Truitt, an expert, who pointed out the necessity for sound-dampening material in business houses to conserve the health and efficiency of the nation.

"Concentrated mental effort has something to do with this increased pressure," said Mr. Truitt. "But it has been scientifically demonstrated that the sudden jump in blood pressure is due mainly to noise. High blood pressure is one of the mysterious diseases recently has been taken to solve. An increase of 10 points in blood pressure means that that business man is crowding 10 years of energy into one year of time. He is clipping years off his life. He is rushing to physical breakdown. He is sending death a gift-edged invitation to come and get him."

"Every sound in a modern office is magnified from 12 to 16 times. Each reflection is a tiny echo. But in the confined space of an office these tiny echoes are piled together into a confused reverberation. In this chaos of noise, it is as difficult for the mind to function in concentration and orderly effort as for a ship to sail in a stormy sea."

"The only remedy for the plague of noise which is a necessary part of modern industry is sound-proofing in walls, floors and ceilings. Noise affects the brain like little hammers beating and weakening it. Silence leaves the mind unimpeded to do its work effectively. Noise connotes wasted energy. Silence means efficiency."

PARKWAY EFFECT WILL BE GIVEN STATE HIGHWAYS

By Planting Banks and Slopes With Flowering Grasses, Vines and Shrubs.

WILL HIDE UGLY SCARS

Special to The Courier
HARRISBURG, Sept. 11.—Hunks and slopes along Pennsylvania highways next year will glow with color. Flowering grasses, vines and shrubs will hide the ugly scars which are the result of highway construction. The Department of Highways, which some months ago announced the inauguration of a planting program, has revised that program to include the setting out of blossom-bearing vines and shrubs.

Highway department officials during the last few weeks have been in consultation with the Department of Agriculture and Forestry and Waters, the Game Commission, the Bureau of Municipalities and the state biologist relative to planting along Pennsylvania highways. Jack Paul D. Wagner, secretary of highways, and William H. Connell, engineering executive, are anxious to hasten planting so that passers over Pennsylvania roads will not be continuously through landscapes scarred by the activities of road builders.

The department, in instructions to engineers has notified them that they may make requisition for vines and other growths they deem necessary. The state will require approximately 300,000 vines. These will include wild roses, ramblers and creeper vines, the matrimony vine, which in spring has a yellow blossom, the holly vine, which bears a blossoming of which honey-suckle, the blossoming of which ranges from white to red, the yellow, forget-me-not shrub dogwood, which has white and pink blossoms, spirea with white blossoms, the snow berry, the trumpet vine, the holly vine, which bears a lavender blossom.

But the colors will not be confined to the vines the department will plant. The engineers are making selections from 10 grasses—including white clover, the pink alfalfa clover, the blue hairy vetch, the purple alfalfa and yellow vetch. These grasses will be used for slope planting in conjunction with orchard grass, meadow fescue, timothy and perennial ryegrass. In planting on the berms or shoulders of the roads the department will use Kentucky blue grass, red top, red fescue, timothy clover, perennial ryegrass and white clover.

"A comparatively small cost Pennsylvania highways can be given a parkway resemblance," said William H. Connell today. "There is no reason why the state's many marvelous miles of scenic splendor should be marred by unsightly cuts or hills and naked shoulders."

Straight Outline Paris' Fall Mode

New Frocks Continue Use of Plait and Scarf; Colors in Fashion.

Opinion has been the chief attraction in Paris for the past few weeks, debating what the modes for fall and winter will be.

At the opening day of a fashion show in the New York Herald-Tribune, and elsewhere, perhaps among a high number on a Laus model, would immediately broadcast the return of the straight outline—another will be so impressed by a garishly-colored plaited frock that she will announce, with some show of positiveness, that this will dominate the fall season. The general reaction is emphasized by the persistent efforts of professional photographers, each of whom complacently assures an anxious world that no new frock can be made unless it exploits some perhaps unobtrusive or long-defunct accessory.

The bewilderment resulting from these cross currents and impulsive conclusions is indescribably more troubling than the uncertainty attending the general prospect of the mode. A complete frock, illustrating all of the so-called dominant styles, would probably include every known fashion motif since the days of the late Queen Victoria. Of course, much of the news is authentic, but the task of separating the wheat from the chaff is almost impossible for the dilettante.

Obviously it is impossible to formulate an absolutely accurate picture of the new mode until all the returns are in. And even then a final decision must be deferred pending the verdict of the ultimate arbiter—that portion of fashionable society which has been truly named the creative vanguard. Yet, save where economy dictates, it is not in the nature of mink to await the final pronouncement of the jury. And the invariably hasty acquisition of at least a portion of her wardrobe with the new fashions are well in progress. Her most serious failing in making this selection will be found, not in the divergent early dispatches, but in the clothes which are being worn at the smart French watering places and new frocks, Deauville and Antwerp, reveal a far closer conception of the new autumn mode than the Paris opening. The latter represents only the intention of the designer, but the frocks worn at the fashionable resorts exhibit not only the advanced ideas of the couturier, but what is infinitely more important—the favorable reaction of smart society.

White Satin Tunic.
A winsome frock seen at Deauville was a Douillet creation consisting of a white satin tunic elaborately embroidered in crystal and jet over a white satin foundation skirt. The tunic is very interestingly finished down the front and at the edges by a hem of finely corded white satin.

An attractive dress which made its debut on the Deauville sands was a sports dress of white kaisha trimmed with composition buttons in red. The dress, which was in straight chemise form, opened at the left side. The novel feature was a short, narrow scarf which is given length by the addition of white crepe de Chine, finely plaited.

Another at Antwerp had an extremely long tunic-bodice of white linen, embroidered its entire length in a spray design of varicolored flowers. This same design appeared on one end of the long red crepe de Chine scarf. The skirt was of white plaited crepe georgette. With this costume was carried a novel parasol of white organza, on which were appliqued flowers of colored tulle matching those on the tunic.

A jeune fille model in simple peasant blouse type with an odd-shaped panel formed by plaitings in the center front. Was attractive. Touches of embroidery in dark blue and gold emphasized the beauty of the pale blue.

A conf-dress is a typical fall style designed by Cheruit for Madeleine Lely of the Paris stage. It is developed in white kaisha, and trimmed with leopard skin. A touch of the barbaric is added through the gold belt and huge gold buckles.

The outstanding characteristics of these models are the tunic blouse, the scarf, the plait and a silhouette which, though still straight, is by no means simple. The tunic-bodice is undoubtedly destined to be a most potent factor in the new mode; the scarf and plait are equally certain to return in new and interesting variations and a more detailed silhouette will undoubtedly distinguish the fall fashions.

Brilliant Colors Are Used.
Whenever white and black collaborate as a color vogue, they assume a benevolent, fraternal attitude toward the rest of the spectrum, and the Paris designers are taking advantage of this generosity to introduce a medley of vivid colorings which promise a brilliant autumn palette. Black and white combinations have lost none of their White Kaisha Coat-Dress, Collar and Tie Ends of Leopard Skin.

Importance in the realm of fashion, but the bright-colored frock is equally significant in the advanced fall models seen at the smart French resorts.

The new colored frock like the flower garden with their tulle in creases of color. Dresses in dark tones, notably black and navy, are richly printed, embroidered or appliqued in various hues. White backgrounds are similarly decorated. Black and navy are mounted on foundations of flesh tone, pure white or black, and a color note is introduced in the accessory or in some component part. Thus a lovely black, lace frock from Calais, made with a triple-bow lace skirt, has underneath this skirt a broad up-centering ash girdle of pink moles, the ends of which are revealed at the left side. With this is worn a delicate hat, one of the new polka-like cloches. This particular hat is made of printed chiffon, the design being large poppies in tones of yellow and pink, while at one of the sides are posed huge golden poppies. As an added touch of color there is a large crepe georgette handkerchief tucked in the bodice of the dress and matching exactly the color of the pink moles.

Shaded chiffon dresses in several shades of yellow, usually yellow or olive, are much in evidence at Deauville. Several models of this character, designed by Jean Patou, attracted favorable comment at the recent races. Patou's chosen color for these models is a rich yellow, which gradually shades almost to brown. Madeleine Vionnet prefers mauve, for which incidentally there is an excessive vogue. Mauves, violets and purples are seen in combination with almost any color. In their own rings they often tone to red or blue, emphasizing principally the orchid pink or the periwinkle and hyacinth blue.

Charming Toilettes.
Among the lovely toilettes noted are a mauve in periwinkle blue chiffon in which the skirt ends are a rich orchid pink and the hat trimming is of large bunches of asprey dipped in the same vivid purplish pink.

Occasionally there is noted a toilette all in one color with every detail dyed in harmonizing tones. Thus on occasions the felt hat, the leather of the shoes, the stockings and the fabric of the gown each gives evidence of having passed through a single dye pot.

Brilliant flashes of color are sometimes added in side panels which flare in funnel shape at one side. A charming dress worn by a well-known Parisian actress at a Ritz hotel dinner-dance, was in shimmering silver cloth, sheath fitting and molting every line of the figure. From one side of the skirt there burst a cornucopia-shaped panel covered with shimmering fringes of ostrich feathers.

Almost every costume of neutral tone, or of black or of white is enlivened by color in the hat, the scarf and the parasol. In the new scarves these brilliant color spots appear frequently at the ends. Large handkerchiefs are folded to form oblong squares and then lengthened by means of crepe de Chine panels of some emphasizing color.

"I thought Doctor Lancaster would have told you about him. He's a graduate of Johns Hopkins. Old Doctor Lancaster wanted to build up an institution here where we hill people could work among our own. But the plan fell through. The hospital in Avonmouth got hold of most of the money, and then—there were other difficulties. I don't know about them—I've only been here three years, and Doctor Jenkins wasn't graduated then, and we never pay attention to the gossip of the villagers." She checked herself hastily, as if she was afraid of compromising herself.

"Doctor Jenkins has given up his life to the work here," she continued. "He lives at Millville, but we hope some time that Doctor Lancaster will build up the place again, if only—"

"There was almost a look of agony on her face, and again she turned her eyes upon Joan's face as if to search out her thoughts. Then, with an abrupt, "good night," she turned away.

Joan called to her as she was leaving the room. "Miss Fraser," she said, "I understood there was a patient here besides Mrs. Dana."

"The matron turned slowly toward her. "There was the boy who left this morning," she said hesitatingly. "But I understood from Doctor Lancaster—at least, he didn't tell me in so many words, but he gave me to understand that there was a special case here, requiring care and sympathy."

"The matron stared at her. "No one's nobody," she said. "Nobody except—"

Suddenly she uttered a convulsive sound, and, putting her hands over her face, ran from the room. Joan heard her stumbling down the corridor outside as if she had gone blind.

She stood irresolute in her room. Her sleepiness was gone; she was afraid, and she seemed to have got out of her depth. It had begun with John Lancaster's strange behavior in his office the evening before. She had not been able then to reconcile him in any way with the Lancaster whom she had seen, snug, self-satisfied and vain, in the operating room, the bully who kept the nurses in subjection and fear, though he was the traditional John Lancaster of whom she had heard. Then there was the man Myers, equally strange; and the matron. Some mystery was at the heart of it all; and Joan was the more afraid because the reason for her fear was unknown to her.

Her sleepiness was gone. She stood beside the window, looking out into the darkness. A whispering sound was coming monotonously among the pines; and there among the hills a solitary light was twinkling. The air was cool and balmy scented. It was like the dearly remembered days at home. But in the heart of that peace was apprehension.

Looking back now, Joan thought that she had undertaken a rash and extraordinary adventure in coming so far from Avonmouth alone and at the disposal of a man whose reputation was an evil one. She would go home in the morning.

Something was wrong, and in spite of his apparent kindness an inner prompting warned her to beware of

She would remain. She decided that while she was dressing.

Lancaster. He was at the heart of all this, and had whispered her in some scheme for his own purpose. She looked her door and went to bed, to sleep restlessly.

Chapter V

When she awakened it was morning. The sun was streaming brightly into the room. Through the window Joan saw a scene of exquisite beauty, the rolling hills, the winding road, the forest glades. Underneath the shadows were scrambling for the corn which the matron was flinging to them. A thousand birds were awing, the universal robin and the bluebird of her beloved home. The dew lay heavy on the leaves and grass. Joan saw a shadowy creature. This was her own country, and she had come back to it. Her fears were dissipated with the night shadows.

She would remain. She decided that while she was dressing. And yet a doubt was in her heart. And with it came the remembrance of something that had disturbed her during the night. Flitting into her consciousness came the recollection of an anxious mobile rolling up to the door, and of music voices converging in low tones under her window. Then the machine had rolled away. It must have been about two in the morning.

Perhaps a patient had been brought to the institute, thought the girl, as she went downstairs. Mrs. Fraser's door was closed, and the only person aside seemed to be the colored maid, who nodded and smiled as she looked up from her sweeping. Joan began to pace the long veranda in front of the building, looking out across the hills and thinking over her situation.

Perhaps it was only morbidness, or mental fatigue, that had made her read things in the faces of Myers and Mrs. Fraser which did not exist there. Perhaps the day would disclose her position more definitely.

She was walking past the open door of the building when she saw a man leaving the doctor's room. It was Myers, the secretary. He saw Joan and came briskly out upon the veranda.

"Good morning, Miss Westworth," he said, in his rasping tones. "Pleasant weather, isn't it? Much better here than in the heat of Avonmouth."

"How do you do, Mr. Myers," said Joan, trying to overcome her instinctive disgust of the man. "You have a new patient here, haven't you?"

He looked at her with a sort of quizzical shrewdness. "What makes you think that, Miss Westworth?" he inquired.

"I thought I heard an auto drive up to the institute last night."

Myers looked at her in the same manner. "The doctor came back last night unexpectedly," he said.

"But I thought Doctor Jenkins lived at Millville?"

"Not Jenkins, Miss Westworth. Doctor Lancaster."

"Why," stammered the girl, "I must have misunderstood, then. I hope Doctor Lancaster is not ill. He was looking unwell when I saw him the day before yesterday."

"What's just what you might have told me when I asked you about him," said Myers triumphantly. "Well, Miss Westworth, if you are going to ask me questions I suppose I can ask you questions."

"If I can answer them."

"Precisely," said the other. "I want to know if you can answer them. Now let's be frank. What do you know about all this?"

"I beg your pardon?" Joan inquired, declining his invitation to seat herself beside him.

"About all this," repeated Myers. "Come, now, you know what I mean as well as I do. How did Doctor Lancaster come to change you?"

"If you have really a right to know, Mr. Myers," said Joan, "you had better ask Doctor Lancaster himself."

"O, all right," said Myers humbly. "Only the time will come when you'll wish you'd been frank with me. If we put all our cards on the table we can have a frank look into the situation."

"Really, Mr. Myers, I had no idea that I had come to a gambling house."

Myers grew red. His short, stocky figure with the wide shoulders looked abominably mean as he planted himself upon the porch and surveyed Joan with a furtive, sneering expression.

He was not in any sense a gentleman, just a few class of bully, as Joan could plainly see from his gestures, even if his next words had not made this plain.

"So that's your attitude, is it?" he said, jerking out the words between his teeth. "All right, Miss Westworth, you and I will play our hands separately. Don't come to me afterward, though, and say I didn't warn you. And if you don't like my ways and speech, and think I'm too ordinary for your taste—here comes the doctor! Go and make a complaint about me!"

Joan, turning from the man in disgust, saw Lancaster standing at the door. She went toward him, and then she looked at him in consternation. For Lancaster was undoubtedly ill. His face was a dead white, and he was leaning on a stick, as if to support himself.

Doctor Lancaster—Joan began. He straightened himself with an effort, held out his hand and took her own. "I am very glad you came, Miss Westworth," he said. "I hope you like the institute?"

Myers, who had come up and planted himself between them, hung out his challenge.

"She likes the institute all right, doctor," he said, with a short laugh. "but I reckon she don't like me. Bad waste, I call it. What do you say, doctor?"

There was an indescribable insolence in the man's tone. Joan looked for one of Lancaster's explosions of flaming wrath. But to her amazement none came. He seemed struggling to control himself. He flushed and looked from one to the other.

ize Being Held Back, in Part, by Slowness of Furnaces to Come Into Market for Fourth Quarter Coke.

From The Weekly Courier
The latest increase of 1,000 tons in the production of coke last week was more in the nature of a sign of a prospective improvement in the coke situation than it was concrete proof that an actual improvement has already taken place.

No material enlargement has taken place in the aggregate demand for coke, but there has been some shifting about which, with a little business developing here and there, has justified the merchant producers adding to their output. They began to pursue this course during the third week in August and have continued it from week to week. The gross gain in tonnage has not been large, as tonnage is measured, and even now the total merchant production is but 24,730 tons or less than it was at the close of July.

Prior to the third week in August merchant production was sawing up and down, one week showing an increase, the next a decrease. Last week was one of two successive weeks in which this irregularity was absent and the period during which merchant production has progressed steadily but slowly has been so short, however, that it might be venturesome to consider it as permanent in character.
But it is to classify it as indicating that the present trend is toward better conditions.

Such conditions are slow to materialize. Concerns of furnace coke are still backward about a similar move for the fourth quarter. Even the spot market is dull some sluggish-ness being observable in the absorption of production over. Above the equilibrium on which the contracts These facts create a situation which is without immediate improvement to the trade although there is hope that prevailing conditions promise better things, both in the matter of demand and, possibly, more remunerative prices.

The furnace coke producers do not seem to have as much incentive as their merchant brethren to augment output. Leastways they have not yet commenced to do so. Their total is still hovering around 17,000 tons, having declined from 19,000 during the past three weeks. The decline last week was but 500 tons, as compared with 1,100 tons during the previous week. The lessened decrease, together with preparations being made in the region with a view to adding to the output in blast furnaces, indicates that the coke situation is beginning to improve. Last week there was no change whatever at the furnace plants so far as oven operation was concerned. The merchants added 108 ovens and several of their plants got into the six-day cycle, which previously had been running but five days.

The estimated production of coke
during the week ended Saturday, September 6, was 25,110 tons, divided between the two districts as follows:
Connellsville, 17,410, a decrease of 490 tons; Lower Connellsville 7,700, an increase of 2,100 tons, or a net increase of 1,610 tons as compared with a net decrease of 10 tons during the preceding week.

By interests the production was:
Furnace, 17,400, a loss of 500 tons;
merchant, 7,710, a gain of 2,100 tons as compared with a loss of 1,300 and a gain of 1,200 tons respectively, during the week ended August 30.
The increase of 108 in the number of ovens in production was all at merchant plants and were as follows: Freedom, eight; Griffin No. 1, 25 (Thompson No. 2, 188.

furnace interests and the total compared with the corresponding week in City Official Insists on Salary Cuts.

M. W. Edgerton, City Law Director of Knoxville, Tenn., in a non-partisan business administration, went into office at $8,000 a year.
As he cleaned up the mess of work,
and his duties became less arduous,
he asked for a salary cut of $1,000.
Now, with even less work to do, he has asked for another cut of $1,000, to $6,000 a year. But he wants his assistants raised $500 a year.

INGOT PRODUCTION 36 PER CENT GREATER IN AUGUST THAN JULY

General Buying Continues Favorable.
Orders Increasing in Number
And Size; Growth Slow

Special to The Weekly Courier
NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Review will review the steel and iron trade tomorrow as follows:
Steel ingot production was 35 per cent greater in August than in July,
and was in fact equal to the May rate,
so that in one month the losses of two months were regained. The August rate was 58 per cent of estimated capacity, but necessarily finished steel production and shipments did not pick up as promptly and probably averaged about 50 per cent for the month, against somewhat over 40 per cent for July.

The Pennsylvania railroad has purchased 10,000 box and automobile cars and there are inquiries actually in the market or in immediate prospect for 15,000 to 20,000 freight cars. Definite information is lacking as to how rapidly the freight car steel trade will have to make heavier weekly deliveries of freight car steel than they have been making in the past few months. The same observation applies to rails recently ordered and now a prospect of being bought. In both cases the new business is needed to sustain the position the steel mills have already been occupying.

General line steel buying, by jobbers and manufacturing consumers, continues to present a favorable appearance, orders increasing in number and sometimes in size. The buying is widely distributed. Increased buying by farmers, so much talked of,
is not much in evidence, though there may be some improvement in the cotton belt.

The general feeling in the steel trade is that the market has been improving in point of activity as rapidly as could be expected, and fully as rapidly as should be desired, the great interest being in permanence, when the unhappy sequel to the bare of buying early this year is so fresh in memory.

Unshod steel prices have shown no really material change for a fortnight or more and in general have held up very well considering the adverse circumstances.

Hydro-Electric Plants Stopped by Drought

Last autumn the worst drought in 25 years drove the steam generating plants of New York state electric companies to their utmost capacity to replace the flow of electrical energy normally generated by the hydro-electric plants of the state.
Shortage of current and serious interference with industry were avoided only because of the adequacy of the steam auxiliary stations and the interconnection of transmission systems.

The drought that began in California, with the decreased snowfall of last winter and has endured ever since has emphasized the vital need of steam stand-by plants to take up the generating load in the event of a water failure. So severe is the present California drought that water from more than 400,000 acres of land and in spite of every effort the state's supply of electricity has been cut 25 per cent.
